Those words from David Fincher, who directed the critically acclaimed film "The Social Network," were fitting in a way for Kyle Chandler, who stars opposite the talented Meryl Streep in "The Story of Us," as he was perfectly cast to play the ruthless college football coach in the movie. And while Chandler seemed to relish the idea of playing such a dark role, he also admitted a certain degree of intimidation, given that he's never played a coach before. "It's a good reason to have played this guy because it's scary," Chandler told Fox411's Bill Kracker during the May 13 episode of "Celebration of the Social Network." "I like it because it's interesting," he went on, adding that the part gave him the chance to "rock a microphone" as well as throw a football. "I'm doing everything I can to make it a breath of fresh air," said Chandler, who plays father figure to Streep's character, a New York Post sportswriter who falls for her subject – and an on-the-rise football prospect. "The real reason is because I love the character and I want to play the character,
