Tomi Lahren Did It. She finally did it. The conservative commentator, famed for her hard right stances and abs of steel, uttered the first really hateful thing about a black man in a long time. She took to Twitter on Sunday night to blast the Justice Department, after the agency released a statistic that the crime rate among black and Hispanic men are very high in certain states such as Louisiana. “Hate is not an American value, but this White House has made a political career out of it,” she tweeted. “They demonize their political opponents, shamelessly use race-baiting dog whistles, and continue to spread blatant falsehoods about black inner-city dwellers.” Meanwhile, she retweeted a post by conservative commentator Erick Erickson, who tweeted about the current political climate: “The moment we collectively say, ‘Never Again,’ a big black guy with an Italian name running in 2020 will not get within shouting distance of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.” Tomi Lahren Slams ‘White House’ With ‘Blatant Lies About Black Americans’ — Conservative News (@BIZPACReview) March 26, 2019 She followed this up by retweeting a post that read: “The crime rate among black men in Louisiana was the highest in the country in 2015. And here are the stats from the DOJ’s National Statistics on Crime and the Criminal Justice System.” The post then included links to the DOJ stats.

The former Miss America beauty queen, who was fired from a talk show over her pro-Trump views, sparked outrage among many of her followers. “Unless you’re a moron (and none of us are), you know this is a Liberal/Jew trick to turn Black Americans against Trump supporters,” she replied to one person in a comment. “Hate is not an American value, but this White House has made a political career out of it. They demonize their political opponents, shamelessly use race-baiting dog whistles and continue to spread blatant falsehoods about black inner city dwellers.” – @TomiLahren
