Devanagari Writer [Win/Mac]

The Devanagari is the sacred script of Hindu tradition. It is called so because it is the Brahmi of India, but the phonetics are similar to the Sanskrit alphabet. This variation has been evolving continuously for centuries. It has its roots in the Harappan script of the Indus Valley Civilisation of the Early Harappan era. The Devanagari script has almost 45% similarity with the Sanskrit phonetics, but in case of Sanskrit, it was the only script that was inherited by other south-Indic languages. In case of Devanagari, it is not the case, but we can find that it has influenced a few scripts. One of them is the Nepali script and the other is the Bhangi script. The Devanagari script was almost totally neglected over the centuries, and almost the same thing has happened to it in the present day. Because of its spiritual importance, it was kept secret in temples and only meant for a few people. There are only five main classes of Devanagari characters: Sanskrit The Sanskrit characters are considered the most sacred script of the Hindu community. It was always used in the Vedas, the Upanishads, the Shastras and it is a part of the religious literature. At first, it was called Bharati script, but as it was used in different Hindu sects, it was known by the different names. It used to be written on palm leaves and stones. The writers did not bother about how it looks, and they used to write it with different styles, depending on the religion. English The English or Latin alphabet is a Roman alphabet, which is the only alphabet used in all the English-speaking countries. It is the most commonly used alphabet in the English language. It is also used in the European countries and in some parts of Africa. The languages like French, Portuguese, Spanish, Italian, Dutch, Scandinavian languages, German, Polish, Hungarian, Czech, Slovak and Hungarian, have their own variations of the Latin script. The English script is not sacred, it is not a part of the Hindu scriptures, it is not written on palm leaves and stones, but in the Devanagari script there is a variation of the Latin script which is called Brahmi. The Brahmi is a character in the Devanagari script, which looks like a small-capital O with a line coming up from the center. It was also called Hindi
