In a rowdy localised competition, Indian schoolchildren beat the ghar ka khoon, or the human cannonball, in an energetic display of athletic prowess at the 85th session of the International Indian School Sports Council (IISSC) in Tokyo, Japan. The Indian team, made up of children from the Delhi-based National Institute of Sports (NIS), emerged victorious after a close fight with teams from countries like Australia, Singapore, China and Indonesia. In the end, it took India three attempts to take home the cup. In 2010, the same team — under the national men's basketball team — had topped the competition, but in another closely-contested three-way match. Their victory came after they out-shouted and out-defended their opponents from
