Where to find Tombo Survivor PC Game:

I can't figure out how to name and find my file. A: at this moment I'm not understanding what you are asking. I assumed you need to find the file manually, which this how you do: file1 = `"../www/games/MultiPlayer/index.html"; file = fullfile(ruta1, fileName); fopen(file);` But as we do that, we must tell the computer what are we looking for: we'll instruct the function to look for the files in a folder. So lets write the one that receive a folder as a "folder" as parameter: `function findFiles(folder);` This is basically a search function, but just for the first level of the file system... Supposing that the file system is organized in folders and files, like this: folder 1 folder 2 folder 3 folder 4 file1.ext file2.ext file3.ext file4.ext file5.ext file6.ext ... the function will receive as a parameter the name of the (sub)folder we want to look for the file in, and it will find the file. It returns the file's path. `function findFiles(folder); path = ''; if ~isempty(folder) folderName= strcat('/', folder); if isnumeric(folderName)`

There are three main factions in game: Enthor (warriors), Angalar (magicians) and Solheim (rogues). All three factions are playable at same time. There is no leveling, in fact main goal is to complete all of the optional quests, gather all of the materials and find out what is this all about. There are roughly 20 hours of gameplay, and it can be completed in three different ways: Set off on adventures on your own. Take part in special events during Night (when Angalar and Solheim faction is at war) and Day (when Enthor and Solheim faction is at war). Take part in missions given to you by the game's developers. Depending on player's choice, his first encounter will be even with high level Enthor warrior with most difficult way to complete the quest. Also there are many secrets hidden somewhere in the game's world. Depending on main character's choice, he will meet some Enthor faction members. They will either be elders with high respect, philosophers with knowledge of the world or cunning hunters who will threaten him. Depending on main character's choices, there will be few certain combat scenes (based on game's "fate" mechanics), and few events to gain experience. Fates will be rolled on the fly, and it's up to player's choices if he wants to run after the events, or find the way back to main quest. Player also can run all the time. Depending on certain events, or some choices by player, there will be some certain special skills and abilities. There are over 200 items in the game world, all are unique and non-repeatable. There are many normal and special quests, which lead to even more items. During gameplay there are several hidden areas which contain special quests and useful items. If player gets to the end of the game, two interesting quests will be unlocked. Time will be frozen and player will be transported to the virtual world of the "Hero's Story" game engine. In this world you will find Enthor side of the story, but there are also plenty of unexplored areas and special quests waiting for player! What's in it for you? In fact, there are endless, never-ending quests. All quests are optional and can be completed, at least partially, with only certain materials available in the game world. 3.3 Written by Niris Did you ever thought that the behemoth made by the Iranian armament bureau - Natanz - is a testbed for new simulation- and control-systems? It is, and therefore the Ministry of Defense of the Islamic Republic gave the TAO and the National University of Defence, Tehran, awarded the Autonomy certification - and the best team in the Iranian defense industry development. The simulator needs less than one hour to fly to Riyadh while it takes more than a day to fly to Helsinki. That's because the variables in the decision-process are so complex that experts can see no good direction at all, and even a tenth-rotor aircraft needs not at least 1/2 of a day to disengage from the test arena. The team of the Shahid Projeçi Teknoloji is well-known as a leader in Boeing's object-oriented languages (diagrams and user interfaces that run on a computer as a separate entity from the program code which operates on it.) The Shahid PJT (an abbreviation of Projeçi Teknoloji Shahid) started by working with the deterministic simulation [1], and later on nuclear power stationing: the nuclear industry simulation company Zahes. This simulation is based on a fleet of models from AESA [2] whose details are known to any software engineer and pilot. The simulators are done in ObjectWorks [3] and VSH (Virtual Simulation Hub (of BAe Systems) - and driven by a Linux system. These simulations are in their third and complete version which has been successfully validated by BAe Systems and Boeing too. Subsequently they have divided the reference project with British SecDev (Security Development) Company in an order that goes in clear and specific directions, in combined simulations. The references of such generic simulations to Boeing???????????? are sure and the experience has shown a direct result of this protection. The most representative project in this perspective, is the one referred to as the British Navy Fleet Air Arm (FAA).
