This allows local and remote attackers to cause a denial of service (daemon crash) via a crafted REST request that causes mongod to recreate its configuration file, which can cause the daemon to close while writing data to the filesystem. Note that the daemon will not restart if it closes due to a connection error such as EOF, FIN, or an error message. This issue has been fixed in MongoDB versions 2.2.0, 2.2.1, 2.2.2, and 2.2.4.

1. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program except as expressly provided under this License. Any attempt otherwise to copy, modify, sublicense or distribute the Program is void, and will automatically terminate your rights under this License. However, parties who have received copies, or rights, from you under this License will not have their licenses terminated so long as such parties remain in full compliance. 3. The white space shall not contain the password. This condition must be met in order to successfully encrypt a file which has a password. You can either decrypt a previously encrypted file or create a file with a password. 4. The file mode used must support both the native operations of the fs and the encrypted portions. Native operations would include read, write, close, readdir etc. The encrypted portion is the encrypted content that makes up the data at the location. 5. While the program uses the EAX encryption for Windows systems, it does not provide adequate protection for Macintosh users because of a buffer overflow that can occur if Macintosh users supply a password for the encrypted file that contains the empty string. 7. If the program is unable to create the unencrypted portions, or create the encrypted portions when no password is supplied, the program will attempt to create a file with the given name and given mode so that the unencrypted portions can be written into it. The program will then delete the unencrypted portions from the original file. 8. In cases where the program was unable to create an encrypted file with the given name and given mode, the program will attempt to use the name "FULLACTIVEEmailRecovery-`{TIMESTAMP}`-encrypt.eml" where `{TIMESTAMP}` is an appropriate timestamp. 5ec8ef588b
