Q: AngularJS two-way data binding I'm trying to do simple angularJS coding and I'm having trouble implementing two-way data binding. I'd like the user to be able to edit the value in one text input field and then in another text input field to see the updated values. I can do this by assigning two functions to the focus-in and focus-out events but then the other field changes do not update as well because it fires the focus-out event and misses the updated value. If I try to set the 'value' property, this updates the field as expected but the focus-out event still fires. What should I do? JS Code:

var vm = this; vm.someField = "";
    vm.someOtherField = ""; $('.field').bind('focus-in', function(e) {
    console.log('focus-in'); vm.someField = $(e.target).val();
    vm.someOtherField = "Hello" });
$('.field').bind('focus-out', function(e)
    { console.log('focus-out');
    vm.someField = $(e.target).val();
    vm.someOtherField = "Hello" });

HTML: A: I would suggest using ng-model so that you can use ng-
