Exif Viewer is a program that lets you check and analyze the metadata (technical term for EXIF data) of any kind of image file, e.g. JPEG, GIF or TIFF. The program also gives you a quick and easy way to retrieve the information and allows you to modify the EXIF data and save the result as a new image file. The program has a simple interface and you can also use it with a single image file at once. With Exif Viewer you can read and change the data related to the date, time and location of the file or image, you can see the camera model, the aperture, the shutter speed, the ISO speed, the focal length, the digital zoom, as well as the creation date and time of the file. You can also see a preview of the image and add or modify the EXIF data. Using the EXIF Viewer, you can also work on a batch of files and have them saved in a single new file. We have also tested the program's file recovery feature and found that it works for many images and for some images even with partially damaged EXIF data. TinyTIM is a digital time correction software. Use the program for the correction of time information or time synchronization (synchronization of the local time with the time server). The application allows you to use various sources of time information for correction, including standard time servers such as GPS, radio frequency receivers, such as an atomic clock or satellite navigation systems, astronomical position data, measurements of the cycle of the sun, such as from a device which measures the Sun's azimuth, and more. The software can also be used to fix broken time synchronization data, and for recording and restoring your own clock. The interface is quite clean, easy to use and easy to understand.

Many older adults with cognitive impairments (CI) live at home with family and friends. This study aimed to develop and validate a questionnaire to identify caregivers' self-care needs and resources. It was developed from three interrelated theories: the theory of coping strategies; Person-Environment Fit; and the Andersen Behavioral Model of Health Services Use. Reliability was tested by Cronbach's α and validity by factor analysis and convergent and discriminant validity. In-depth interviews were conducted with nine caregivers of persons with CI, using an interview guide. A combined analysis of qualitative data and quantitative data was used to develop a questionnaire. Cronbach's α was 0.65. Factor analysis indicated two factors: Personal self-care needs and knowledge and resources. It was hypothesized that a low score on both factors reflected a caregiving situation that is maladaptive to the person's own personal care needs and resources. The newly developed questionnaire had high internal consistency and test-retest reliability. Exploratory factor analysis revealed two dimensions: self-care needs and knowledge and resources, respectively. The instrument is reliable and valid. This is the first study to develop and validate an instrument to identify the needs and resources of caregivers of persons with CI.1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to a camera system in which film is selectively supplied from a loaded magazine to a film take-up device through a film passage extending between the magazine and the take-up device. More particularly, it relates to a camera system in
