CAIRO — The Egyptian armed forces clashed with supporters of the country's deposed leader on Sunday as night fell in the capital, causing mass casualties in a pro-Mubarak stronghold in central Cairo. The fighting in the Kasr El-Einy district of Cairo, just a few blocks from Tahrir Square, was raging into the early hours of Monday. The police said 32 officers had been injured. The clashes, which intensified late in the evening, appear to have been sparked by an argument between pro- and anti-Mubarak demonstrators. The fighters from both sides were easily identifiable by their distinctive team colors, which they wore on their headbands. One crowd that had been standing on the street near the main entrance to Kasr El-Einy turned into a mob, setting fire to businesses in the area and smashing windows of automobiles, the police said. Officers responded by firing tear gas, rubber bullets and birdshot, according to the Associated Press. Q: How do I empty a secret field in a form? By default, Rails empties hidden fields on submit. But I want my form to behave differently. I have a custom_attributes.secret_field field that stores a Password. How can I empty this field before a form is submitted? A: you could overwrite the authenticate method on your controller action. class ActionController::Base def authenticate if method == :post && params.empty? @user = User.authenticate(params[:email], params[:password]) redirect_to some_path, notice: 'You are now logged in!' elsif method == :get && params.empty? session[:user_id] = params[:user_id] end end end United States ex rel.
