Office 2013-2016 C2R Install.Industrial equipment (e.g., heating, ventilating, and air conditioning systems and HVAC systems, refrigeration systems and HVAC systems, power distribution equipment, plumbing and drainage systems, etc.) are often exposed to the environment and experience a variety of adverse conditions, such as precipitation, debris, moisture, airborne contaminants and other harmful substances. For example, industrial equipment typically comprises a power supply which serves to supply power to the system. In many industrial equipment systems, the power supply is remotely located and is in direct electrical communication with the system to supply power to various components of the system. In other systems, the power supply is locally located at the system and supplies power to the system through one or more power cables. Due to the adverse conditions that may be encountered by the power supply, various components of the power supply may become damaged by moisture intrusion, power loss, or other detrimental effects. Such damages may render the system inoperable. To prevent such damages, a power supply may be equipped with some type of rain, de-icing, and/or corrosion protection system. For example, a power supply may be equipped with a canister which contains a desiccant material and which is able to absorb moisture from the air and thus prevent water and moisture from affecting the power supply. In many systems, the desiccant material is regenerated by heating the canister and thus burning the moisture absorbed by the canister. Such regenerating systems, however, may be expensive, as many types of industrial equipment are manufactured by high volume producers and the systems are often incorporated into a line of industrial equipment which is frequently upgraded over a period of several years. In addition, since many industrial equipment systems are located in harsh environments such as factories and warehouses, the environmental conditions may significantly reduce the efficiency and reliability of such desiccant regenerating systems. (dot), - and _ (underscore), (No special characters allowed). A: Well the first thing is that you should not try to save space. Use the regex pattern like this: ^.(?=.[A-Z])(?=.[a-z])(?=.[0-9])(?=.\\.)[A-Za-z0-9._-]{6,}$ If the password should be at least 12 characters long then use this: ^.(?=.[A-Z])(?=.[a-z])(?=.[0-9])(?=.\\.)[A-Za-z0-9._-]{14,}$ Basically I am looking for a string that begins with at least one uppercase character, followed by at least one lower case character, followed by at least one number, or period, or underscore and has a minimum of 12 characters. This is the Java code I used to test: public class Main { public static void main(String[] args) { String s = "testt12334545dfdsdfsdf"; s = s.replaceAll("[^A-Za-z0-9._-]", " "); Pattern p = Pattern.compile("^.(?=.[A-Z])(?=.[a-z])(?=.[0-9])(?=.*\\.)[A-Za-z0-9._-]{
