As there is no such thing as a country-free space, it would have been easier for them just to put all components in a single box and sell it for the price of a couple of hard-disk drives.Q: how to create responsive dashboard with huge images? I need to create a responsive dashboard with couple of images and several inputs. In fact it works well with a default image and label, but if the image's size increases, it gets outside the screen. If I use fit-width/fit-height it ruins the responsiveness of the dashboard Is there a way to wrap the images inside a with width: 100%; height: auto; and make it responsive? if the images gets bigger than the viewport, they should get smaller. The photos are uploaded with the template A: This is a fairly common problem and there are a few easy solutions. One way is to try to use fit-width/fit-height on the parent div holding the image if possible. There's also a bootstrap-responsive.css file that might do what you want. Another solution is to use a negative left margin on the image. This is the same as applying left: 0; to the css. I usually use calc() for this as it seems a bit more responsive. Something like this: margin-left: -((100% + (width of screen or viewport)) / 2); This way the image will always be centered in the container. You can also set a min-width for the image. Q: Error while invoking a python script in AWS EC2 from Terminal I have followed the steps mentioned in the blog and successfully been able to run a python script in AWS. I am able to run the script successfully. When I tried to run the same script in my Mac terminal using the same steps, I'm able to start the script, but it exited with following message.
