1. Field of the Invention The present invention is broadly concerned with a slide assembly for use with a die assembly of an extrusion press and which is easily adjustable to accommodate articles of different sizes, so as to present more than one size of extruded products in a single die cavity and, more specifically, the present invention is concerned with such a slide assembly which is easy to adjust, which is positively locked in position so as to prevent accidental adjustment thereof, which has substantial strength and which is simple and inexpensive to construct. 2. Description of the Prior Art Extrusion presses are widely used to continuously produce an elongated product having a transverse cross-sectional configuration which closely matches that of a die assembly within the press, the die assembly having a primary portion which defines a path of extrusion and a secondary portion surrounding the primary portion. As used herein, the term "extrusion press" means a press having an annular housing and an annular die assembly located therein. The term "extrusion product" shall be used herein to mean any cross-sectional configuration having at least one dimension longer than the other two dimensions and which is capable of being extruded in a press having a pair of platens. The term "welding die" shall mean a die assembly defining a flow path having a cross-sectional configuration corresponding to that of the desired extruded product. When extruded products of different sizes are to be produced, it has been conventional practice to make or purchase a die assembly of a size appropriate to the smallest size of product to be produced. Such dies are often heavy and costly to produce and handle. To produce a larger size of product, an entirely new die assembly must be obtained which is expensive and time consuming to install. In order to minimize costs and expedite production, it is known to provide extrusion press assemblies of modular construction in which a slide assembly which includes the pressing elements can be easily replaced if necessary, and which will be readily adjustable to accommodate articles of different sizes to be produced. The present invention provides a slide assembly of this type.Pierre Verrecchia Pierre Verrecchia (23 October 1952, Paris – 4 July 2018, Paris) was a French film actor, stage performer, singer and comedian. These materials are typically referred to as "EPS" (Expanded Polystyrene) and are offered in various colors. The demand for such plastic sheets is increasing because they are relatively light in weight, being less than half as dense as glass, and the plastic itself is easily cut. The plastic sheets offered on the market are biaxially oriented polypropylene sheets. These sheets are typically prepared by heating plastic pellets and then extruding the heated pellets into a sheet with two axes of orientation. The extruded sheet is passed through
