I am using the Google Maps Library within one of my Xcode projects. While it is in the "use" phase, it might be better to disable the use of this framework, until I don't need the functionality it provides (right now I am using it to display a series of markers on a map). Is there a way to do this within Xcode or do I have to open up the project in another IDE that will help me to do this? I don't think Xcode has an option to disable a framework altogether, does it? A: You should remove the import in all the files that need it. The project is not broken if you don't have it. You can get it (and the framework file) by installing CocoaPods. decision to deny the petitioner's habeas petition. Its analysis of the merits of the petitioner's ineffective assistance of counsel claim appears as follows: In all of the foregoing examples of sufficient prejudice, the advice from counsel was either constitutionally deficient in that it failed to conform to the Sixth Amendment, or that, if provided by counsel, it would have assisted the client in his defense. The Court is not stating that a due process violation based on a Sixth Amendment violation will always trigger a habeas corpus remedy, but the simple fact that the petitioner's counsels' ineffective assistance resulted in a fundamental miscarriage of justice mandates relief, and the state's concern over the practical problems of proof are not sufficient to grant summary judgment to the State. Sylvio v. People, 805 P.2d at 1376 (emphasis added). In contrast, in regard to the failure of Sylvio's counsel to advise him of his right to testify, the court made the following observation: In order to show that the failure of his counsel to advise him of his right to testify was prejudicial to him, Sylvio must show that the court would have allowed him to testify had he been so advised. He has not made any such showing, either in his motion or in his brief 3da54e8ca3
