therapy in the management of palmar hyperhidrosis: a retrospective study. Laser therapy is a highly efficacious and well-tolerated treatment modality for patients with hyperhidrosis. The objective of this study was to compare the early and long-term results of laser therapy with those of medical management. A retrospective review of 36 consecutive patients with hyperhidrosis was performed. Laser therapy was performed in 23 patients, and 13 received medical therapy. Patients were followed up for at least 4 months posttreatment and completed questionnaires addressing a variety of aspects of the disease. Results were graded according to the amount of perspiration reduction. Sixty-nine percent of the patients treated with laser therapy had a >50% reduction of pers

Q: Find the slope of a function that is not a straight line a)  $y = x^3 + 3x^2 + 3x + 1$  b)  $y = x^2 + 2x + 1$  c)  $y = 2x^2 + 7$  D. The slope of the linear function that passes through the points  $(1,2)$  and  $(1,3)$  A: Hint a) As  $x$  is a constant, there is a linear relationship between  $x$  and  $x^3$ , and hence between  $y$  and  $x^3$  as well. Can you use this in order to find the slope? Q: Silverlight vs Flash in terms of UI performance, quality and compatibility After watching 'Dark Side of the Moon' (watched it a couple of times) - just to mention that it's a really well-written and well-constructed documentary on the state of Flash - I'm wondering how Silverlight can compete with it in terms of UI performance, quality and compatibility. You have to look at it from the end-user point of view - that is, how does it differ on the desktop and mobile? A quick Google search (and questions here) suggest that the compatibility issue was fixed in the latest Silverlight release. So, how does it look and run on a mobile phone? (I've never used Silverlight before. I only know Flash and HTML5.) A: This is an old topic, but I believe the correct answer is to re-answer it now because it is important for people's jobs. Flash is great on desktop, but terrible on mobile. That's why Flash video fails. The mobile video infrastructure that Flash has is built for TVs not for phones. The problem with Silverlight is that it can run on a variety of mobile devices and each device has its own Flash Video engine, each of which is different. By that I mean they have different codecs, different screen sizes, different screen densities etc. Different! So, for example, Flash Lite uses an old version of

Britain has become the first European nation to remove mercury from thermometers in an effort to combat seasonal health impacts. Health officials announced the ban, which will take effect on July 1, in early April. The move comes after the World Health Organization forecast a jump in mercury exposure resulting from higher temperatures this summer. The agency said mercury is often used in industry and the majority of the mercury in thermometers is used to make other products such as fluorescent lights and batteries. The decision will not affect hospital and GP research thermometers, which are already widely mercury-free. Mercury is an element that, while in a healthy person, the body can safely absorb at low levels. Exposure to high levels has been linked to impairments to neurological and emotional development in children, significant impairment to hearing in adults, and to the formation of cancerous tumors. The levels of exposure to mercury used in medical thermometers -- as high as 10 nanograms -- is already far above the limit in new federal standards for exposure to the toxin set out in a 2014 report from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. But the WHO's researcher Esther Friedrich said the current standards for mercury are not an adequate measure of health impacts. "There is strong evidence that this limit is too high, so the new international recommendations need to be followed," Friedrich said. The World Health Organization forecast higher mercury exposure during the summer in Europe, because of the change to lower mercury levels in thermometers and the fact that mercury accumulates in the body in warmer environments. Irk Tarhan, a health minister in Turkey, said the announcement of the ban was a "milestone for public health" for the nation. "The mercury in thermometers starts to build up when it
