Civile Shqiperi 819 Free.Q: Set React Native MapView initial data in body I'm currently trying to implement a map view that loads initial data from a json file. I have the data loading fine - it works fine on a normal page in react native. However, in order to use the view I had to wrap the initial data into a `The initialRegion` property is where I'd like to set the initial data like this (as a point): `map: new Map({ initialRegion: {lat: 37.0902497, lng: -122.1481317}, providers: [Google, Yahoo] })`, And everything is working fine except for the `initialRegion` is not accepting a latitude or longitude. I need to be able to define this latitude and longitude as a property of the view like I did in the code above. Is there an easy way to do this, or am I supposed to have the entire view wrapped in a `ListView`? A: You have to give your `MapView` a region. So a region just like you have a `Polygon`, `Circle`, etc. They use this information to calculate the zooming you want, so if you put one in you have to be ready for that behavior. There is no way to create an object using a lat and long other than to extract them from a `POI`, which is why I would say that your only other option is to wrap them in a ListView. Q: How to get most common value from 2D array

---

Input

[["a","b"],["a","c"],["a","b","c"],["a","d"]]

Output should be a,a,a,c A: You can achieve this using two simple steps: find the unique items (the largest items); group by those unique items. Here is a function that takes the input as an array of arrays
