When I'm developing a new feature, I get this question quite often: "Where should the "content" of the new feature be stored in memory?" So, here's a typical scenario: you have a class called "Car" that contains three fields, brand, color, and year. The data, along with all of its operations, reside in memory with the class. A "Car" object resides somewhere else in memory. So, do you put the brand, color, and year in the object, as fields, or do you put them in the class? My hunch is that most of the data would be stored in the

Believe it or not, this is the plot behind the latest prank in the bizarre new franchise called "Jackass," the raunchy cable TV series that mocks the daredevil antics of real-life daredevils like Brad Mancuso and Johnny Knoxville. Mancuso of Goremont, Pennsylvania, will rappel 8 to 10 feet from the edge of a cliff, while Knoxville and several of his cohorts will stand below watching. But the show won't just play out the same old shots of Mancuso plummeting into the water. Instead, he will actually toss the ring up to Knoxville. Knoxville's job: To fish the ring out of the pond with a stick. A representative for Knoxville's "Jackass" production company, Big D and Associates, said the bizarre episode of "Jackass" scheduled to air Monday

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a surface light source device for use in a surface light source substrate, and to a display device including the surface light source device. The surface light source device of the invention includes a light emitting member and a rod-shaped light guide member formed to guide light from the light emitting member from the tip thereof. 2. Description of the Related Art Light guide members for use in surface light source devices have been proposed in various forms. For example, Jpn. Pat. Appln. KOKAI Publication No. 2000-154784 and Jpn. Pat. Appln. KOKAI Publication No. 2007-89536 disclose that a light emitting member is arranged on a front surface side of a light guide member, light from the light emitting member is guided by the light guide member from the front surface side thereof, and the guided light is output from a light output surface of the light guide member to the outside. However, in the case where light is led from the light emitting member to the light guide member as described in the above publications, light emitted from the light emitting member is led to the light guide member by adhering the light emitting member to a side surface of the light guide member. However, adhering of the light emitting member to the side surface of the light guide member may cause the light emitting member to float, resulting in that the level of the light emitting member may deviate from the initial set level.Q: Security access rights of an object - object implements Authenticate I'm working in a C# project using ASP.NET MVC.
