Satsuki Decoder Pack License Key: MD5 sum: CECDC95848A9A46AD2C14D7CC5C6C7E4 Size: 81.92 MBThe present invention is directed to a method and apparatus for providing an improved interface to a health care information system. More particularly, the present invention is directed to a method and apparatus for providing a standardized remote diagnostic interface to health care information systems. Health care is comprised of a number of different activities performed in the medical care environment, including the identification of particular diseases and illnesses, the diagnosis of the underlying diseases and/or illnesses, and the treatment of such diseases and/or illnesses. A large part of the diagnosis is a process of reviewing physical data (e.g., x-ray films, MRI scans, ECGs, etc.). The data is collected and stored in a database and analyzed by trained individuals. Data is also collected from information systems such as electronic health records, lab systems, pharmacy systems, immunization systems, etc. This collected data is used to determine the diagnosis, the monitoring of the disease or illness, and the evaluation of the treatment. At this time, there are several different types of software systems for collecting and analyzing data used in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases and conditions. For example, there are: computer-based systems which collect, store, and retrieve data for treatment planning and follow up; electronic medical records (EMR); personal health records (PHR); clinical management systems (CMS); medical imaging systems; and patient-centered electronic health records. These software systems have been developed to meet the demands of a complex health care environment. For example, medical records may be stored in a digital format and allow for greater accessibility to patients and practitioners. Furthermore, with the increase in the amount of data being collected by these software systems, there is an increased need for analyzing data. For example, there is a need for an interface to efficiently analyze the data to determine the diagnosis of diseases and illnesses. However, a problem with the software systems and
