11. The EOS Digital Rebel XT / EOS Rebel XSi is an interchangeable-lens (EF-S) digital camera with a 12.1-megapixel APS-C (1/3-inch) CMOS sensor that records images in RAW format (12-bit color), a maximum ISO range of 200–3200 (expandable to ISO 102400), and an f/1.8–f/5.6, 25mm–105mm, 18–55mm lens. The camera body is approximately 10.3 × 9.9 × 5.8 inches (267 × 249 × 146.8 mm) and weighs 2.5 pounds (1.14 kg). It has a vertical fine-pixel shift, playback, focusing, and movie mode. The camera offers a 3-inch LCD monitor. Image stabilisation is provided through lens-based image stabilization and image stabilization technology in the camera. An on-camera flash provides fill flash, and a mechanical shutter is provided. The camera has a wide ISO range of 100 to 102400. This is a good camera for light-shooting conditions. It has an EXPED 2 processor, which is designed to deliver rapid performance. The camera provides the most, or some of the most, capability of any consumer digital camera available, with the exception of the Leica M9. It also sports a more advanced AF system than previous EOS models. It offers a number of new features, such as face detection, a 61-point AF system, HD movies, 4K-HD video capture with both 24 and 30 fps, Time Lapse, RAW image capture and conversion via the DIGIC 6 processor, and an ISO range of 100–3200. However, it doesn't have a viewfinder. This camera has a pentamirror setup, so you won't have viewfinder blackout when using the viewfinder. It is noteworthy that this camera does not have a PC back like earlier EOS cameras, which will likely be a disadvantage for some photographers. The camera performs well, provides ample detail and colour reproduction for most types of photography, and for many photographers is worth the extra dollars in its price. It is a camera that is great for an experienced photographer who wants a camera that can take a great image and that has advanced features. There are other available DSLRs that are designed to cover a wider variety of photography genres, such as Canon's EOS DSLR (EOS 550D/Rebel

Single evoked potential changes during the go-no go task. We used the single evoked potential (SEP) technique to examine changes in brain activity that occur during the performance of the go-no go task. The go-no go task involves the application of the subject's will to respond to a go stimulus by withholding a response to a no go stimulus. A sequence of 8 go and 4 no go trials was presented. The trials were separated by an interval of 1-2 min. It was found that the no-go response elicits a median-nerve SEP that consists of two dipole regions of increased activity (greater than 400 ms and 870 ms), whereas the go response elicits an early (64-280 ms) and late (ca. 560-860 ms) negative-going SEP. Changes in activity were also observed in the frontal-central channels, irrespective of the task. The final slow positivity that follows the no-go response onsets approximately 1.5-2.5 s after the no-go response in the contralateral frontopolar (FPI) and ipsilateral frontal channel. The distribution of the positive waves suggests that they represent a motor response. Jets notebook: Bennett bringing a little intimidation to the Giants' airwaves FLORHAM PARK, N.J. – The “invisible man” won't be wearing a Jets uniform, but he's wearing a microphone and a suit jacket, and will make appearances this week on local radio stations. Bennett, who was released by the New York Giants on Jan. 15, spent three days in the Big Apple before flying to New Orleans for the NFC Championship Game. He spent Thursday afternoon with NFL Network doing live commentary from the Superdome. Bennett and his wife, Shannon, then flew to New Jersey and will appear on 94WIP in Philadelphia on Friday night and WNBC in New York on Saturday morning. Bennett said he has about two hours per day to get his interviews done. “I feel like I have to do this. I've got to get this out of me,” Bennett said. “It's been a great experience, and I love doing it. ... It's fun. I can't get enough of it.” Bennett hopes to make the Packers' coaching staff. Packers coach McCarthy will be in New
