Bodies of water are an important source of fresh water for people living in various parts of the world. If a person chooses to live along the edge of a body of water, the person must make adjustments to live there. For example, the water itself may be relatively cold or cold. Accordingly, persons must dress appropriately to avoid getting cold or must wear clothes to help insulate themselves from cold water. For example, water immersion suits may be worn in cold weather, or wet suits may be worn in water bodies such as lakes and oceans. These suits may include an inner layer of moisture absorbing material, which may be wet or cold. Such suits may be difficult to manage, or may be difficult to don or to remove.
