[Evaluation of brain function with potassium-40 and technetium-99m during and after two-stage treatment with hyperbaric oxygen]. The influence of Hyperbaric Oxygen on cerebral function during and after the treatment is evaluated quantitatively with brain K40 and TC99m or by the mr angiography. The K40 hyperbaric oxygen treatment induces significant changes in the cerebral blood flow and metabolism and only has effects on the brain function which is a decrease of the median evoked potential, a slowing down of the reaction time and an improvement of the contrast sensitivity. The TC99m changes are smaller than the K40 ones. The treatment with TC99m during 2 stages followed by Hyperbaric Oxygen cures late cognitive deficits.[Clinical and virological characteristics of malignant lymphomas and herpes simplex virus infection in patients with AIDS in the Russian Federation]. The most frequent types of the malignant lymphomas in AIDS patients are presented. Rates of development of the lymphomas in different anatomic sites, morphologic variants of lymphoid cells, and morphological characteristics of lymphomas are defined. It is shown that in AIDS patients with malignant lymphomas, changes in the size of the lymph node, its shape and anatomical position in the body, size of extranodal lesions, central nervous system involvement are more pronounced compared to those in patients without HIV infection. A number of peculiar clinical and virologic features are described.

Combination of malignant lymphoma with herpes simplex virus infection in AIDS patients is described. A number of pathogenetic mechanisms of the cancer-lymphoma association are discussed. The last few weeks have been somewhat rough for Sega. First, the company announced that it would be discontinuing its Virtual Boy in North America, and just a few hours later, they announced that it had been classified as a "game accessory" by the Japanese Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry. Shortly after this announcement, the company's CEO and president, Hayao Nakayama, announced his resignation. Now, the company has posted an announcement to its website indicating that this "Wii launch of Sega is canceled. We will prepare a more suitable strategy for our business." No other information is given, but this might be a hint that
