This is because Windows will be constantly writing data to the disk to store it back into memory. With all these unnecessary data writes being done, your system's performance will begin to suffer. Here is the fix. As soon as you start your PC and it is running without being idle, make a right-click on your taskbar and select 'Task Manager'. From the Task Manager window, click on the 'Advanced' tab and check what process is taking the most resources, this usually is the Memory Usage. Then select the task and hit the End button on the bottom-left corner. Now, the system won't swap memory for the specified process anymore, which makes the system run much faster. How to improve system performance in just one click There's no need to wait until you get home to see if this trick will work. Click here now to get some immediate results.
