Be sure to check your email for my reply.Pete Buttigieg, the Democratic presidential candidate, has opened the second of four general-election polls conducted in Iowa, the state that kicks off the nominating process. The surveys, released early Tuesday by the Iowa State University–Politifact News Cooperative, show Mayor Pete tying Sen. Bernie Sanders, the Vermont independent, for the lead in the Iowa Democratic caucuses, the next nominating contest on Feb. 3. The surveys, which included interviews of 473 Iowa likely Democratic caucus-goers between Jan. 21 and 23, give Buttigieg 15.4% support in the Democratic primary, just a point behind Sanders' support of 15.5%. Former Vice President Joe Biden is in third place with 14.9%, followed by Sen. Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts (13.9%) and Sen. Kamala Harris of California (13.1%). Rep. Beto O'Rourke of Texas registered 5.8%. The survey was conducted as Buttigieg spent the morning holding events across Iowa to rally support. He appeared at an event in Waterloo and was scheduled to appear in Davenport, Ames, Sioux City, and Ankeny, according to a Buttigieg spokeswoman. Two days before Buttigieg took the debate stage last week, his campaign released a list of seven priorities for the former South Bend, Ind., mayor's first 100 days in the White House. (One of those priorities was to release his tax returns.) Since then, Buttigieg has begun to shift his focus to the general election. He's invested a growing amount of time in campaigning in early-voting states — including Florida, Arizona, Nevada, and Iowa — and promised to spend the rest of his campaign focusing on his general election performance. It’s a dramatic shift in the strategy: Following Buttigieg’s poor showing in Iowa — his average score on four key factors (visibility, electability, judgment, and problem-solving) was 0.6 — his campaign put the rollout of his general-election argument largely on hold. (The campaign did not respond to a request for comment on this story.) Buttigieg’s team decided to start pushing their general-election argument with the launch of his second Iowa survey. On Jan. 21, the campaign began promoting Buttigieg’s general-election argument with the release of a new version of his website, as well as his major policy announcement for the general election: a plan to “transform” the federal government. The economy, and especially the job markets for the most economically devastated areas of the United States, remains a key focus for Buttigieg.
