He also had a big sister. But one day they found the sister of Ollie's mother alive. Because the child was found by Ollie's family, they took it into the house of Ollie's grandmother to care for it. Ollie loves the baby because she has to look after him, and he can play with her. Ollie cannot leave his mother, though. But when he gets home, the girl comes out of the house, and Ollie wants to take her home, but his mother says that he could never leave the family. Ollie is torn, but he decides to do as his mother says because he could never leave his mother. There has been a lot of talk about John Boehner, that short-fingered puppet, the enabler of the debt ceiling standoff, the treacherous sycophant of Barack Obama, the House Speaker who tramples on the rights of women, minorities, the poor and seniors, who forgets his duty to represent the will of his constituents, who carries water for the White House rather than for the House of Representatives, the leader of the party of no, who can't
