The error message I get is: The name 'TargetSearchResultListBox' does not exist in the current context from private ListBox TargetSearchResultListBox; TargetSearchResultListBox = new ListBox() { Name = "TargetSearchResultListBox" }; I think this is because my references are out of date but I'm not sure. When I run Visual Studio the DLL for the latest Windows application templates appears to be set to "No". I've tried uninstalling and reinstalling Visual Studio but this makes no difference. It would be easier to just replace references but I'm not sure how to do this. A: The solution turned out to be quite simple. I tried replacing references in the Properties window and the references in the Project window. Once I did that the references that weren't listed in the Properties or Project window started to become visible. I believe this was because Visual Studio was interpreting "DLL not found" errors as references missing. Linux File System The Linux File System (ext3 or XFS) is a POSIX compliant file system used as the default file system in the Linux operating system from version 2.4 onwards. It uses journaling and block allocation. It is the default file system on the Ubuntu 7.10, 8.04, 9.04 and 10.04 editions. As of version 2.4.9, the ext3 file system is being complemented by the ext4 file system, as ext3 is no longer supported. Nevertheless, the ext3 is still available
