“Designed with an open atmosphere, this game is much less of a dungeon crawler and much more of a sandbox-style roleplaying game that throws you into a world with no set script. The combat is streamlined but still challenging, and the overall feeling of exploration and discovery is something that only a game of this scope can create. A fantastic strategy RPG that is close to being a spiritual successor to the real-time strategy genre.” 8/8 - GameXplain “Legend of Heroes XIV probably has a more high-fantasy feel to it, considering the time in which it’s set and it’s inspiration, but it’s no less of a mixed bag of fun. Not only is there many, many hours of gameplay if you’re satisfied by lighthearted hack-and-slash gameplay, but this game can easily be enjoyed by almost anyone. If you’re in for an easier time and don’t mind a slightly more easygoing gameplay experience, Legend of Heroes will be your best bet.” 8/8 - Den of Geek “Here’s how most strategy roleplaying games work: you’re put in the middle of a vast, beautiful world, you go to do whatever you please, and you fight anyone who gets in your way. There’s a bit of a history to this genre, since the original Dynasty Warriors started off as that style of game, but it has matured over the years into a more solid and feature-packed experience. Legend of Heroes is a unique addition to that lineup, combining this straight-up hack-and-slash with a much more serious story.” 7/8 - IGN “This is a different kind of game that has been made on the Legend of Heroes series. As you progress in the game, you’ll reach the point where you can join other players in the game and go questing together. It’s like you’re actually going on an adventure, experiencing a fun story as you go, but it’s not a game that’s going to keep you in there all day long - you’re going to come across enemy after enemy as you go, but you’ll spend a lot of time exploring and exploring, making the game a game of discovery. “ 9/10 - PC Gamer “ bff6bb2d33
