G protein alpha subunit variants have been described in patients with type II diabetes mellitus (DM II) but not type I DM (DM I). To address this issue, a genetic association analysis of 21 G protein alpha subunit gene variants in DM II and DM I was performed. The analysis involved 1551 individuals: 1297 patients with DM II and 254 control subjects. Allele and genotype frequencies for the G proteins were similar between the DM II and control groups. However, under the conditions of these analyses, no mutations within the G protein alpha subunit genes were observed in DM II. Seven G protein alpha subunit gene variants were significantly associated with DM I. In the DM I group, carriers of the G alpha i3 Thr49 --> Arg allele had a significantly higher risk of developing DM I than carriers of the Arg allele (P=0.001).
