The Business Development Team, which functions like an internal team to help an executive build the company, was created in order to encourage "bottom-up thinking" and help prevent one or two key players from starting to think that they could rule the world. In fact, the Business Development Team is made up of so many people that even if it was necessary for a few individuals to make major decisions, the smaller number of members should be able to make those difficult decisions and still avoid having to face
