this course was designed in conjunction with advanced law enforcement rapid response training (alerrt) to provide first responders and other professionals with a model response program they can deliver to civilians within their communities. may also be referred to as civilian response to active shooter events train-the-trainer (craze). the trainer battle is a combat system that allows the player to compete in a rank-based tournament to reach the top. some of the tournament are: "bomb" (2p) - win all the battles. "puzzle" (2p) - win each round without being hit by any enemy attacks. "submersion" (4p) - win each round without any pokmon on the opposing team being submerged. "trap" (4p) - win each round by trapping an opposing pokmon on the field. "escape" (4p) - win each round by escaping from a poison trap. "sack" (4p) - win each round by throwing a pokmon out of the field. "win" (4p) - win all the matches (without any player being eliminated). "elimination" (4p) - eliminate all the pokmon on the opposing team. as supreme leader ayatollah ruhollah khomeini emerged from the shadows to take charge of the revolution on february 1, 1979, the countrys leader at that time, the shah of iran, mohammad reza pahlavi, left for exile in the summer of 1979. this was the first of many moves by khomeini to undermine the monarchy. even before the shah had departed for exile, iranians took to the streets to protest the shahs ousting and the deposing of the prime minister. the shahs departure, however, was only a start. khomeini allowed the people to express their resentment in demonstrations, and then in marches that grew in scale and intensity. in the spring of 1979, a representative of the national front for resistance against the shah, hoda saber, said, the question now is, who will take charge of the country and who will become the leader? (1) the iranian opposition was faced with the choice of either waiting for someone else to become the leader, or to take charge themselves and to take a risk.
