DNA complexes with oligonucleotide and aryl phosphates like phenylboronic acid were synthesized. The tetranucleotide d(CpGpC) was condensed on the 5' phosphate of oligonucleotide through the 5'-C-3' bond. The oligonucleotide was subsequently oxidized by iodine, which resulted in the formation of an aryl iodide derivative, followed by the treatment of aryl iodide with triphenylphosphine. The most effective reaction was carried out in the presence of tetrabutylammonium fluoride (TBAF) and 3-cyano-4-hydroxycinnamic acid. Three hydroxyl groups on the aromatic ring of aryl phosphates were activated by 3-cyano-4-hydroxycinnamic acid, so that the CpGpG reaction did not proceed to completion. The reaction product was treated with the acid, which hydrolyzed the activated hydroxyl groups and dephosphorized aryl phosphates from the 5' ends of oligonucleotide.Update The date of the event has changed!
