Theoretical development and experimental demonstration of an optical system that generates ghost images using binary phase modulators (BM) as an imaging device are presented. We use simple mathematical expression and phase-only spatial light modulators (SLM) to explain why ghost images can be achieved and show that ghost images can be produced with a temporal modulation rate of 817 Hz. Also, we prove that half the diffraction pattern from a single slit can be obtained by imaging the BM to the zero-order diffraction pattern at the Fourier plane. To demonstrate the experimental observation of ghost images, we use a spatial light modulator instead of the BM and a coherent light source, instead of an incoherent light source. Some possible applications of this technique are also discussed. Tuberculosis in the family: a study of 58 cases of tuberculosis. A study was made of the tuberculous cases diagnosed and treated at our hospital from 1992 to 1995. Forty-one patients were under 18 years of age; 19 of them had no BCG vaccination and 23 had been vaccinated. Infection developed de novo in 21 cases, in five cases the mothers were infected with active tuberculosis; one case had a relative with active tuberculosis. The most frequent clinical manifestation was respiratory, but in 16 patients disseminated tuberculosis was diagnosed. In half of the cases it was not possible to determine whether the patient had developed tuberculosis de novo or had been infected with active tuberculosis. More than 40% of all cases were underweight, most probably as a result of malnutrition. The diagnosis of tuberculosis was based on the history and clinical findings in addition to the chest radiograph, and in 31 cases other organs were also involved. Only in 15 cases was the diagnosis confirmed by laboratory techniques, mainly by a purified protein derivative (PPD) test (33 cases). Most cases were diagnosed with a PPD test taken 3-6 months after the first symptoms had been noticed. All patients received anti-tuberculosis treatment. In 48 cases was cured and in 10 cases was completed. Two patients died of cause other than tuberculosis; one of them was a child who died from an accident. It is not possible to state exactly what happens to tuberculous patients who

A kid who has no superpowers. A kid who is just like any other kid. But, most of all, a kid with a very special gift. As the only child of two average parents, Peter Parker has many advantages and disadvantages that most kids don't. But one thing he does have is the attention of the world. This manifests itself in the form of a virus that causes people to fall in love with Peter Parker. This virus also makes people believe Peter is a superhero when in reality he has no superpowers. To many,
