You can get or download PDF file about any topic A: grep -o '[A-Za-z]\+' billing-2/getqte.txt The -o option produces the regular expression matched, and the \+ returns only the sequence it matches once. -o sets the output field to an unquoted string [A-Za-z]+ matches any sequence of letters \+ is the end-of-string anchor character The backslash is needed because the shell is trying to convert the escape into a shell escape character. If the pattern is only a regular expression, you could have used it directly: grep -o '[A-Za-z]\+' billing-2/getqte.txt That's the same as: grep -o '[A-Za-z]\+' billing-2/getqte.txt | grep -o '[A-Za-z]\+' You didn't ask about how to do a regex, so that will be left as an exercise for you :-) GetReady for Mrs. Feingold's Chai and Cookies with your 2 students this Friday, July 27th - it's our very first regular meeting!
