Q: modifying a string in C# Here's my code to copy string into a new one string ok = textBox1.Text; string targetText = "ABC" + ok; StreamWriter sw = File.CreateText("") + ok); sw.WriteLine(ok); sw.Flush(); the problem is when i execute the above code i get "ABC" and not "ABCDEFG" A: The concatenation operator in C# concatenates strings, it doesn't repeat previous data. The second data model is a cache of the first, I am using it to load objects into the system for the purposes of testing and debugging so that I can quickly rebuild the data to ensure it is working properly. I know that since the second data model is a cache and since I am creating a new one every time I need to build a new object, I need to put everything into the cache, release the objects, then put the objects back into the cache to load the system with data.

The data model is created in the following manner: - (1cb139a0ed
