Q: Finding the biggest difference of two dates I have a situation where a user enters two dates, each day of the week. If the date is changed, I want to subtract the old from the new (only days), and if the date was changed, I want to show the difference. For example: 20/11/2013: Mon 10/11/2013 Thur 10/11/2013 Fri 10/11/2013 Sat 10/11/2013 Sun 10/11/2013 If the user inputs 01/12/2013, I want it to show: Fri 01/12/2013 Sat 01/12/2013 Sun 01/12/2013 I can't figure out how to subtract the 2 dates? I've been looking at the DateTime type for a while and I'm just not getting anywhere. A: I will build a table that can hold any day of the week. If the current date is represented by the primary key of the table, then I will order the results by days until the current date. Then for any day n, I will check if the corresponding date of the start date is smaller than the current day. If it is, I will subtract the current day from n. If it is not, I will keep the value n. For your example, it would be: +-----

--+ | Date | Day | Date | Value | +-----
-----+-----+-----+
-----+ | 2013-11-20 | Mon
10/11/2013 | 2013-

Wilco Johnson House The Wilco Johnson House is a historic house at 241 Queen Street in the Elmira Center Historic District in Elmira, New York. It is a two story brick dwelling built in stages, with additions and alterations in the Colonial Revival style. It is a rare surviving example of the region's small number of one-room schoolhouses. The house has undergone several significant alterations since its construction c. 1790, including the first Colonial Revival additions (c. 1875) and the contemporary conversion to apartments (1915-1916). It was listed on the National Register efforts to reduce prescription drug consumption have focused on educational campaigns that increase patients' understanding of the benefits and risks of both immediate and long-term therapy. However, an increasing body of research is pointing to the role of the environment and media as important contributors to patients' prescription drug consumption, and the pervasive and oft-criticized medical model rhetoric that reinforces the view of pharmaceuticals as the tools of modern medicine.<sup>^[@R2]^</sup> Finally, there is growing evidence to suggest that medication adherence is = A recent article by Oldfield et al<sup>^[@R4]^</sup> draws attention to the role of the media and global, digital business strategies in shaping public opinion and, in turn, prescriptions. Among their findings is the fact that the efficacy of specific treatments may be oversold in the media, and that single company interests may heavily influence the "herd" mentality that prevails in the population.<sup>^[@R4]^</sup>
