I am trying to trim down the columns to a size where each column has the same number of values (at least 17) I have got as far as: `df.loc[:, df.columns.difference(['A4', 'DA', 'TA'])]` which gives me the indices of the columns that are in the valid set. This allows me to use `df[:, :17]` This seems to work, however I would like to get the exact number 17, rather than the minimal number that will fit the data (I am unsure how many columns are usable, it may well be much less) The problem is that I get a single column back if I do not specify a minimum of 17. Can anyone help me get the number of columns that are usable? A: You can use transpose and then reshape to make more rows in the data: `df[:, :len(df.columns)]`
